They say the nut doesn't fall far from the tree. It's hard to remember any legacy we have had in the Prospector family except one. Years ago there was an insurance agency owner who was growing his business and chose our group to help with that success. John Bovard of Gilbert – McGill Co., was part of the leadership and the energy that helped make Prospectors what it is today. He still is working under the Bovard Insurance Group.

We became excited and anticipated John's legacy, son Zach Bovard of Tight Solutions to bring his own swagger to what we have to offer. Zach has been a forthright part of making a difference in whatever endeavor he chose. His true love from a very early age has been computers - what they do, how they work, and the amazing things that can be done with them and the programs they use to now power our world. Technology could very easily be Zach's middle name.

He touted a few of his personal accomplishments. He has always loved the outdoors, and participates in hunting and especially fishing. A true forager of his deliciously healthy diet. But in his younger years, he worked at a McDonald's restaurant, so he's had his less healthy moments as well. And he is big time into smoking anything - that being meats, fish, and veggies of all types and sizes. (And he was proud to announce his recent conviction to quit smoking - thank God for Nicorette gum!)

He has been a part of the IT (Information Technology) era. He started working it over 20 years ago, holding progressively more responsible positions in various companies and industries. And he has been on his own for at least 15 years, the last 12 years with Tight Solutions.

You could not begin to describe WHAT he does until you hear him tell you about what he loves most - raising his three daughters who all seem to be more mature than their ages - what an adventure watching him help raise and teach each of them so many things he has learned during his life. A job he looks forward to every day.

You ask - so what does Zach actually do. Well, in the simplest terms he had - by using information technology in today's world which we all do, he tries to save us money by purchasing the appropriate equipment for the job and by following a set of industry standards to help maximize consistency and supportability. There - simple - got it?

It comes down to making sure you can access the information you need when you need it, and be able to trust that it is safe and secure. And once he sets you up, he does not just let you swim alone. He has very high supportability which he can access from almost anywhere. Here in KC, or even if on vacation in the wilderness. Zach has your back. And if you are located somewhere else in the USA, he has strategic partners that are there for him.

He is a stickler for making sure your IT system is provided the proper documentation which substantiates how well protected you are; you can rest assured.

So do you have computers at home or your business that are running slow, crashing, or sending you blue screens or error messages 24/7? Well.....DON'T CALL ZACH! That's not his thing. When he does get you equipment to help run your businesses, he does so with the best hardware, and selects warranties to protect your data, and by doing so, creates a great vendor / client relationship. He will maximize your up time and do all in his power to reduce lost productivity. He says he really becomes your company's CIO (Chief Information Officer). This title places under an umbrella your IT Management, IT Strategy, IT consulting, and defined Security Access for both him, you, and your employees. He highly recommends use of Dell products because of the dependability and warranties. Bar none!

Anyone in business with any more than 3 employees is a candidate for Zach's services and expertise. The best referral you might send him are companies that average around 20 personnel, but he has

Looking for administrative / office manager position

FROM: Amy Ashurst

Hi Prospectors!

I have a friend and client who is looking for a job as an administrative/office manager. She currently has a job but needs to find something better to provide for her family. She's a single mama that wants to provide for her little boy and I told her I would do what I can to help her out in finding a new job.

Do any of you have an opening available or maybe you might have a connection with others who are looking for someone like her?

THANK YOU all in advance! I know my friend sure would appreciate this!
