It's Clear To Us All How Important Having Good Lead Persons In Place When It Comes To Networks and Servers

Ever been in a conversation with someone, and after listening to them awhile, you realize you do not understand a thing they are saying?

We're not saying that about our speaker last week, but what we do know is if you use a computer in your personal or business lives, then Zach Bovard of Tight Solutions deals with servers and networked systems that may effect what happens in your technology space.

Zach has been a tech guru for quite a few years. (His father was a former member of Prospectors – John Bovard). Zach's background allowed him to set up call centers for major companies, sell YP advertising, do some programming – all leading to his business status today that handles lots of businesses and individuals making sure that they can use and store data easily and accurately, and be able to accomplish this from virtually anywhere in the world.

Zach's world is being able to be alerted to whenever there is a computer glitch, and be able to diagnose and respond ASAP leaving his clients thinking their systems are running seamlessly. And he does this by having developed programs that let him see what's going on, and what issues arise on a daily, or hourly basis.

He wanted to spend a bit of time educating us about be more present in our online commitments by registering on Goggle Places as a great example. Seems that Google is looking more at geo-marketing, more localized search, and being in Google Places gives all of us a distinct advantage. You can go online, and build your Places profile – it's VERY easy! If you have not gone there, check it out! Worth your time and efforts, and so much that you can customize here. Go there NOW!

Zach still prospects for new clients that are big enough to appreciate his expertise and business acumen.

So if you missed his presentation or need to learn more of what Zach does, pick up the phone and start a conversation with him. You'll be glad you did!
