So What Does A Seeded Bread and Running Around After Someone Have In Common?

You would think these two things would have nothing in common, but au contraire mon ami, they are like peanut butter and jelly.... Like salt & pepper, itchy and scratchy! They were destined to be together from the day they came in contact with each other. They are the Batman and Robin for our time. We speak of the heart and soul of Amy and Chase Ashurst of The Rye Studio.

We missed having Amy there last week to greet us with her wonderful smile and radiant personality, but what the heck, having Chase there was not chopped liver if you know what we mean!

Chase came prepared to share their story – their dreams and their future. You see Amy (her friends called her Rye because of her freckled, fair, and youthful skin.) She began her dream career in high school taking pictures of their class. When it came to real work, she mustered up the courage to send out 49 resumes. She got one response out of 49. But that one was all she needed to give her that chance to prove herself. She learned all about cameras, lighting, and a bit about business. When she reached 25 years of age, she wanted and needed her own place, so The Rye Studio was born. Then one day, Chase was doing an audition for a company and told him they needed a new head shot, and to go see Amy. What was a photo job turned into a several hour long conversation. Two souls forming as one!

Amy has always been the artist. The visionary. Chase much more the PR person, the front man if you will. They work well off of each other this way.

Amy rented space after leaving her mentor going out on her own. She works by using social media and connecting with her young clients and their families. They do a fresh booklet of many different portraits and compositions taken throughout the year, giving future clients a taste of what to expect.

They don’t focus as much on price but more on “capturing the experience” that one gets involved in when they do a photo shoot. They encourage everyone to bring several changes of clothes so they can see who they are and what they like to wear. Sometimes Amy even trades clothes with them because she knows they will look better in things that she is wearing.

Their move out to Stillwell was a big step – owning their own building and making their own decisions. Original old brick, wood floors, and great light exposure at different times of the day make this a truly awesome venue to capture one’s future memories.

They will go anywhere in the world to do a shoot, as they have done. With their new son, Laiken, being added to their lives, they are even more blessed, and want to share his entry to his new world with everyone.

Thanks to both Amy and Chase for adding a great, young, vibrant feel to our group. We hope that they remain a part of Prospectors for many years to come.
