This One's For All The Guys Out There.

There's probably not a guy in the group that thinks back to their childhood, and remembers spending hours playing with his Lincoln Logs, his Erector Set or his tube of Legos. Argh! Argh! Argh! We loved building all kinds of stuff, then tearing it down and doing it all over again. How would like to do that for a living and get paid to play with really BIG Erector Sets?

In a nutshell, that's what Kevin Boehringer of BSE Structural Engineers LLC does for a living. Kevin has found a way to take his proficiency in math, science, and airplanes, and combine all those into an architectural degree. This led him to Michigan where he was designing auto manufacturing facilities. Changes in the economy brought him back to his roots in the Midwest, where he eventually united with an old friend and became partners in business together. He also procured his MBA from KU, and they were off to the races.

BSE has become a real player in designing a building's structural supports, all the girders and footings that allow the architects to do their build outs and create beautiful buildings. No matter what the clients asks, they find a way to make it happen.

Their main source of business is derived from other architects, building owners, design builders, developers, general contractors, and water park builders. Yes, that's right..... People who build water parks. (See Page 2)- 95% of their current business is repeat customers or referrals from them. Water theme parks has become a fabulous niche market for them from being at the right place at the right time when his partner was in the City Planning office when someone asked if they knew of anyone that designed water parks, and being they had done several rides for Worlds of Fun, they answered in the affirmative, and there was born a great, new piece of business.

They cover doing commercial buildings, financial, healthcare, religious, restaurants, retail, schools and auditoriums, senior living facilities, and lots of warehouses! Oh yeh... did I mention water parks?

From now on, be an active listener and see if you hear of someone you know that is looking to build a new building or expand, and keep Kevin and his firm in mind. Welcome Kevin to a great source of referrals and information.
