

A Life Fulfilled With Happiness and Success Are Lofty Goals To Strive For.

Drawing a focus on who you are and what strengths you have in your business and personal lives make it very hard to evaluate yourself. Sometimes we have to take a step back from ourselves and try to see what matters in our lives. Sometimes that vision is impossible.

That's why it may benefit you to have someone you can trust to help see what that focus might be. To see yourself and your life in a different light than you are used to thinking about it. You need someone special that is trained to first help you see yourself, and then to encourage you in what direction you need to be heading. The one person we look to for that kind of advice is Sheri Mortko of Live Like You Mean It Coaching and Consulting.

As Sheri would say – “Je ne suis pas votre conseiller ordinaire.” (translated – I am not your ordinary consultant.) She would say that because of her extensive education in the French language and culture, both learning to speak it, and then living it in where else but France, she is best suited to take a look at one's goals and aspirations and see what you may need to do in order to accomplish them.

She knows she is good at helping her clients do more of what is working now, and to find how to improve those things that are not. What do YOU want, and what do you have to do to get it?

She used an analogy of three strings that are intertwined. The center strand is YOU. The other strand is who around you is learning from you, and the third strand is who you are learning from. Our lives are in constant change and in constant learning and teaching. It is our connections with our business and personal relationships where we exercise these learning challenges. Her great example is with the great musician and clarinet player, Benny Goodman, who has taught hundreds his skills and style, but still, at the age of 90 years young, took regular lessons to keep him fresh and to learn something that he had not tried before.

It is those lessons that each of us must relate to our own lives and our businesses. You must look for those little surprises, for those pieces of energy that will take us to a new level in our endeavors of success.

Sheri's bottom line advice is to just be happy. Be satisfied in knowing that you are doing the right things to be a good person, be successful in your business, and focus towards a higher and better goal each day. These words are ones that will hold us on our paths to success and greatness. Thank You Sheri for taking the time to give us all the hope for a better tomorrow.
