For centuries, people around the world have expressed their status in life by adorning themselves with riches. Gold, silver, jewels colored like the rainbow. Nobility had crowns, weapons, clothing, even coffins – encrusted in diamonds and gems galore.

It has been a symbol of status for centuries. Jewelry, made from elements of nature, helps each of us express what we have achieved in life and the love we have for those close to us.

It is those special moments in life that beckon the giving of symbols of love, of strength, of passion. You need an expert to make sure you find that special engagement or wedding ring, necklace, earrings, or bracelet that commemorates your special event. Who better to turn to than Alan Goodheart of Goodheart’s Jewelry.

Alan, along with his brother, Bruce, a business partner for over 29 years, bring their skills, knowledge, and expertise to the table, providing you the facts in order to make an informed buying decision. They continue to get referrals from their lifelong clients who have kids or grandkids that are getting engaged or married.

They sell colored stones and diamonds, the latter being one of the most beautiful minerals on Earth.

They can place emeralds, rubies, sapphires, or diamonds into one’s wedding bands or engagement rings.

Yes your jewelry is beautiful, but it is not indestructible. You cannot wear it if you are active, or do heavy lifting or industrial work. Your average piece of jewelry is not meant to withstand that kind of abuse. That’s where their expertise in making repairs shines. Luckily, you can repair gold, silver, or platinum. They size rings, solder broken chains and bracelets, and repair watches and do watch battery replacements.

Their strength and specialty has always seemed to be custom designing. They can take a concept or idea on paper and change it into exactly what you desire. They create a wax from a sketch and then cast it in gold or platinum and set your diamonds or other gems.

Alan let us know about what makes him “tick”. He’s been in several long-standing poker games for over 25 years. He enjoys photography, NASCAR, and loves to cook.

But by far what he calls his second life involves his love of legerdemain. He has enjoyed magic all his life, but found a group of magicians, ranging from professionals to hobbyists and everywhere in between. He has earned their trust and has learned a lot about the world of entertaining. Little did he know that along with performing for the group that you could earn “better than beer money” by sharing your skill. It seems the Prospector audience is always ready to see what he has up his sleeve. Kathleen Cussen “volunteered” to be the trusted assistant last week, and did a stellar job working with her eating utensils. (Thanks Kathleen).

So what should you take away from Alan’s talk? With his family being in business since 1951, both he and his brother have been around their industry all their lives. They have knowledge and expertise you can only gain from years of education and dealing with issues day to day. You as customers need someone trustworthy. Whomever you use, take a step back and think about their experience and knowledge to guide you in whatever decisions you make.

Thanks to Alan for keeping us all informed about the Prospector’s news and events, his service to the Board, and for bringing a smile and a laugh to those graced by his presence. He and Bruce are ready to assist in any of your future jewelry needs. Happy Holidays!!
