

Fashion is What You Buy.
Style is What You Do With It.

So when you wake up in the morning, do you ask yourself – what’s my style?? How do others perceive you by what you wear? How you look? Of course they do!

Now ladies, don’t take offense here, but some of us guys just may need a push in the right direction to get us looking and dressing a bit sharper. And thank goodness we have Mike Kopplin of Kopplin Wardrobe Management and Design to lead the way.

Like most, Mike’s family worked hard with a strong business ethic, and Mike has chosen to follow in their footsteps. Mike got his bug in sales by developing business around selling religious books to help put his way through school, and graduated with a speech communications and business degree, and continued his sales career selling IBM typewriters. At the time he lived in Seattle, but the lure of getting into designing suits, pants, shirts, and really anything textile.

He moved to Kansas City with over 100 manufacturers but eventually culled it down to 60 making it a lot easier to address his client’s business and casual attire needs.

Mike has found there are four areas allowing him to differentiate himself from the rest – providing the best customer service he can, create a culture where his clients are excited to see how Mike can help them, which leads to making them more successful business people, and when they are successful, the referrals start coming in, and that increases his growth potential many times. It was just two months ago in May he had his best month ever in business for himself.

It seems listening to Mike tell his story, it is like painting a piece of art for every client he deals with. The suit he had on last Thursday as an example had a beautifully smooth pattern and feel, but attention to detail is what make it a signature suit. The hidden color theme was like a burnt sienna. It appeared from under the collar of the suit to the lining of the jacket and the pants pockets to boot. It also had the button holes accented with white to differentiate it too. He can detail everything down to the style of buttons and custom fit it to your exacting needs. Even if you needed it to be a looser fit in the arms or legs, this can be accomplished. His main goal is to create a dramatic style that still feels comfortable to the owner.

Mike finished by explaining his most recent successes has come from taking a step back and listing what his true goals are and then watching and making sure they are evaluated and followed to prove his success. Even though there may be monetary ones, his faith in God and the love of his family will forever rule and dictate what outcomes his business will provide.

Thanks Mike for always giving us a boost for each of us to look at where we are headed with our style and good looks!!
