

You Can Trust Your Dog to Guard Your House, But Never Trust Your Dog to Guard Your Sandwich.

There is one thing that us as humans love unconditionally – and that is our offspring. Your children are your most precious possessions. They get almost all the love and care you can give them. But human nature takes us back hundreds of years to when times were simpler and we evolved by living in and with Mother Nature. There were many times in which humans became close to so many animals who over time became a part of their families. To this day, having a dog, cat, bird, or fish has become a way we can extend our love to animals which are now a part of our families. Some domesticated, and others not. So if the need arises and YOUR pet falls ill or sick, just like ourselves, we need to get them the vital care they need to get better and survive. Because they can't do it themselves. We love them too much to let them suffer. That is when you need someone who is knowledgeable, passionate, and caring. Someone who you know has a love for animals because it is his calling. That someone for those in Prospectors Club is Dr. Brad Twigg, DVM of Plaza Animal Clinic.

Dr. Brad has been around animals all his life, and has grown to love and appreciate all they represent. As a young lad, he found a calling if you will – the need to learn as much as he could about pets yet not knowing he someday would have the chance to take care and tend to their needs.

He was in college when he applied for veterinary school at the University of Missouri, and got accepted. After graduating, he came to KC and worked approx. 5 years with someone who was his mentor with whom he learned a lot – both what to do to serve his patients (and what not to do). After 5 years, he parted ways, and found someone near the Country Club Plaza who was retiring. In July 2015, he joined this practice and worked with the owner for 6 months before they turned the business over to Brad. There was much updating to do – from cosmetic things (paint, floors, lighting, exterior changes) to bringing the clinic up to the standards he was used to having, getting new modern equipment, and making sure the processes he needed were in place.

Plaza Animal Clinic is a full-service clinic / hospital serving quite a large area, mostly with those living in south Kansas City, many in condos or apartments in around the Plaza area, and extending to the central city, River Market, and even to the Northland. You probably don't realize the extent of his services available: preventive care, dentistry, pain management, flea treatment, boarding, grooming, dermatology, spay and neutering, and surgeries as needed. His referrals have grown and word is out that Brad is their go-to guy for great animal care.

Brad tells us the industry continues to grow with the latest innovations involving what he calls Tele-Health. There are new apps coming out daily, and being able to serve his clients using video communications. He is taking his time and making sure he does all this correctly. It seems that larger veterinary corporations are buying a lot of the smaller clinics, and major players in everything else (Walmart and Amazon) are taking steps to begin entering the vet market, both providing vet services and medical products. You knew it would only be a matter of time.

No matter how hard he works, Brad tries staying in shape by participating in triathlons with his wife. Since last hearing from Brad, so much has changed. They recently adopted a baby boy who has become the receiver of "love" unlike Brad has ever experienced.

And he also has announced that with the help of several Prospectors, he has purchased a piece of land at 5th and Holmes in the River Market area in order to build a new state of the art clinic and offices to serve that area who currently has no other vet around. It should have 4-5 exam rooms, a new clinic, and advanced surgical and orthoscopic services available to serve the area. It will also get those referrals from the Plaza office which they can't handle there. The building will be built to his specs but will be blended into the look and feel that is River Market.

The next 1-2 years will be exciting times both for Brad, his associates and staff, and the Prospectors as we watch a business grow and
