

You love flowers but you cut them. You love animals, but you eat them. You tell me how much you love me, so now I'm scared.

This year Christmas for the Prospectors came a few weeks later, but when the weather turns cold, you know it's time to take a visit. When we come to see Das Hardin of Village Flower Company each November, it must be the official kick start to the Holiday season. You can't even think of one business that is so nicely decorated and puts you into the Christmas spirit better than Village Flower.

And you would understand why it is that way knowing Das' humble beginnings in college when, as a horticultural student, his first job there was at a flower shop in Manhattan, KS. When he graduated, he came to KC working for other small floral shops, working up the ladder and finding his way, learning all the while. When the opportunity arose to possibly purchase his business, he had the knowledge to understand what to offer and how to negotiate. He still says it was the best move he ever made. He has truly maximized the space in the Prairie Village Shops he and continues to create amazingly exciting displays with his merchandising. Das knows his strengths, so he continues working the books and numbers, and leaving a lot of the front end to Cindy who is great at matching product to their clients. The shops surrounding Village Flower all have a great neighborhood draw of clients, thus maintaining a good traffic flow of customers to their store all day long. Das' current space was a flower shop before he bought it, backed with D. W. Newcomer's Funeral Home money. But Das said they were losing money each year before Das took the helm to the tune of about $30K. And it was filthy.

So Das played it cool, and did not get too excited about buying the business — or at least he did not put on like he was excited. But reality was he wanted that space BAD! He held on until he got what he wanted at the price he wanted. And once he signed the lease, he started cleaning it from top to bottom.

Das told us how November and December are two of his best month's business-wise. He has more revenue during the 6 week period leading up to Christmas than any other 6 week period. Mother's Day sales is mostly a 3 day event and Valentine's Day encompasses that week leading up to Feb. 14th.

Das has had in place for several years a Standing Order Program that waives his delivery charges if you schedule having flowers or plants delivered on a regular basis to someone or a company. He has acquired sales to assisted living facilities and nursing homes because having fresh flowers around had made such a big difference to their residents. He also mentioned how his funeral business is not dead at all, but rather people are buying flowers and taking them to decorate the graves of their loved ones. Here Das just says he wished they would have purchased flowers for those they loved while they were alive and not waited until they were gone. But either way, he is happy
