

The Only Way He Could Love You More is If You Were Wrapped in Delicious Bacon.

Kids don't know how easy they have it today. When I was young, I had to walk nine feet through shag carpet to change the channel.

Yes, believe it or not, a version of shag carpet has made its way back. What goes around comes around. Same with everything. When we're talking what makes your home "a home", the one thing you take for granted, and don't think about, but if it wasn't perfect, you'd go crazy, is your flooring. So when the time comes to update your home or build a new one, you want someone who knows what the ins and outs of what your choices are. Who else would you consider but Rick Wolverton of Advanced Interiors.

We learned a lot about Rick and what makes him tick last week, and it's more than work that drives him. You see, we heard how he makes family number one in his life. (As it should be!). Rick is the consummate husband, father, and grandpa to those he loves. And that caring for his family extends to his client base, as he wears the same pants when it comes to helping those looking to make their homes better and more comfortable places to live.

Yes, Rick has things he loves to do – hobbies if you will. Fishing and being outdoors has been with him since a young child. And several years ago, his good friend and mentor, Mike Darby, encouraged him to get his butt on a bicycle while helping raise money for a great cause (LLS), and before he knew it, he rode 100 miles around Lake Tahoe, NV.

But what has now consumed his passion is a burning in his belly. No – actually it is his belly that yearns for the romantic taste of BACON! It doesn't matter how he gets it – with breakfast, on a burger or sandwich, or intravenously. OK – the man loves bacon. Pork fat on almost everything.

When you love something like bacon so much, you know it will lead to something bigger. Rick comes up with so many unique combinations using bacon in his cooking, and is proud to post them online taking pictures of his BBQ creations. Wrapping meats, fish, jalapenos, Oreo cookies, or fruit with the pork delicacy. There is not much he has not added pork to that you could think of. So others were asking him for his recipes and how he creates his goodies. (Light bulb overhead!!!) He now said again – I can do that – and has written a cookbook telling us commoners how it is really done. And the monies he makes from the book goes to a worthy cause. Again a reflection of what he learned from Darby and others.

But Rick still has to finance his foodie cravings, his love of outdoors and family by making a living. And he does that best helping those in need with his many choices of carpeting, flooring (wood, luxury vinyl, tile), kitchen and bath tiles, countertops, award-winning kitchen designs, and all the other accoutrements that goes with them. He periodically gets to bid on huge jobs like carpeting an entire hotel, with the challenge of always doing the hallways with as few seams as possible.

When he works with a client, his goal besides just solving their problem and giving them what they want, it to always do a better job than the client expects. Exceed their expectations. Something we can all strive for in our businesses.

Since moving from midtown KC, he has landed in Olathe sharing space with Janine Terstriep at The Decorative Touch. And it seems to have become an interesting blend of businesses. We wish both a great future success in their location.

If you ever have a chance to work with Rick on any project, you will find out what kind of person he is. He speaks from the heart, tells you the truth, and goes the extra mile when needed. And he thinks nothing of it because that's who he is. If you have the need for any flooring, kitchen, or bath design projects, now
